Announcing National Bike Travel Weekend, June 3 – 5, 2016

A national movement to inspire people of all ages and backgrounds to go on a bike overnight

The Adventure Cycling Association invites you to participate in National Bike Travel Weekend by organizing a bike overnight during the weekend of June 3 – 5, to encourage people of all ages, backgrounds and interests to experience the joy and simplicity of traveling by bicycle and spending the night at a campground, park, hotel, cabin, bed and breakfast, hostel, friend’s house or backyard. This movement to inspire people throughout North America to go on do-it-yourself bike overnights on the same weekend is being spearheaded by Adventure Cycling Association.

“We’re encouraging people to skip the yardwork and head out on their bicycles during the weekend of June 3 – 5,” says Jim Sayer, executive director of Adventure Cycling Association. “National Bike Travel Weekend is for big groups, small groups, and solo bike travelers. It can be one night or two nights, and travelers can sleep outside or indoors. It can be one to 100 miles—whatever works for you.”

Adventure Cycling’s website biketrialweekend.org provides do-it-yourself resources and an interactive map to connect bike travelers. National Bike Travel Weekend trips can be added to the interactive map by filling out a simple form. Those wanting to join an existing bike overnight can search for bike overnights in their area or contact a National Bike Travel Weekend ambassador listed on the website. Ambassadors throughout North America have bike travel experience and can answer questions about going on a bike overnight.

The inaugural National Bike Travel Weekend is being launched as part of Adventure Cycling’s 40th anniversary celebration. Adventure Cycling was founded as Bikecentennial and started as a 4,250-mile TransAmerica Trail bicycle ride with over 4,100 participants in the summer of 1976.
